WINTER PROTECTION

In cold climates Roses need some extra protection over the winter. The earth should be mounded up around each plant just before the ground freezes. The intervening spaces can be filled with stable manure if it is available. After the ground freezes, an additional covering of leaves and evergreen boughs prevent exposure to wind and sun.

HOW TO PLANT ROSES

Roses need sunshine, but it is not necessary that they be exposed to the sun all day; half a day of sunshine is sufficient, either morning or afternoon.

To prepare the beds remove one spade-depth of soil and pile it on one side. This is "topsoil". Then remove a second spade-depth and pile it on the other side. This is "subsoil", to be taken away. This makes a trench 18 inches deep. Rose roots seldom go deeper. Loosen the bottom of the trench with a spading fork. Refill the trench with the topsoil, mixing it with a liberal amount of well-rotted manure, then finish the bed with a good garden soil.

When planting roses, always carry the plants in a bucket of water. Prune the roots by shortening the long ones and making fresh cuts at the ends of the others. Dig a hole deep and wide enough to accommodate the roots, and refill the hole a little at a time, always packing the soil hard on the roots. When the hole is three-quarters full, pound the soil with your heels and all your weight, then pour in plenty of water. When the water has disappeared, put soil in to the normal level, but do not pack any more. Prune the tops of the plants at about 6 to 8 inches above soil-level. This is very important if you desire to have a low compact bush that will produce large flowers.

CULTURAL HINTS

WATERING. Roses like plenty of water. Flood the beds once a week by placing the hose on the bed and letting it run slowly so that water may reach deep to the roots. Avoid wetting the foliage, especially in the evening.

SPENT BLOOMS should be removed, cutting the stem above the first complete set of five leaves. If long-stemmed blooms are desired for cutting, remove old flowers so that two sets of leaves remain on the stalk. The next blooms will spring from these eyes.

FERTILIZERS. In the early spring, mulch rose beds with either old cow manure, peat moss, or lawn clippings. Feed each plant a half teacup full of well-balanced commercial fertilizer every two months during the growing season.

CULTIVATE frequently around the roses. Do not allow the soil to bake and become hard at any time. Remember the roots breathe, and cultivation permits the air to reach the roots. Without cultivation plants will remain at a standstill.

FOLIAGE TROUBLE is caused by atmospheric conditions, some years being more favorable than others, and an occasional dusting with a mixture of nine parts of dusting sulphur to one part of arsenate of lead will act as a preventative. For aphids, a spraying with nicotine or pyrethrum, following instructions on the bottle will control these.
